The number of jobs created and retained were estimated using sound engineering judgement backed by experience on similar projects. Also local area contractors were contacted to determine the work force they would need to finish the project in one construction season. A project of this magnitude would require 2 pipe crews each consisting of 2 equipment operators, 1 skilled pipe installer, and 1 general laborer with both crews being managed by 1 construction manager. Engineering staff required for the design and construction of the project would consists of 1 engineering manager to design and oversee construction, 1 engineering techinian to assemble plans and construction inspection, and 1 construction surveyor for field layout work.
